BURGUNDY

There is perhaps no region on Earth with greater and more lasting tradition with wine. It is the Burgundian way that has convinced many of the world's vignerons to forgo heavy handed intervention and barrel treatment for the purpose of rediscovering the magic of the terroir the grapes are grown in. It is for this reason that we have decided to break our menu into regions for we feel, as the Burgundians, that great is made in the vineyard.

BURGUNDY - CHABLIS

Surrounding the sleepy northeastern French village of Chablis, far removed from the rest of Burgundy are the vineyards of what many people call the greatest and most precise expression of Chardonnay. The vines, which each year struggle to ripen, sit on a razor's edge of electrifying acidity, while soaking up the chalky deposits from its Kimmeridgian soil.

BURGUNDY - CÔTE D'OR

The Côte d'Or, or Gold Coast, is the heart of Burgundy. It is where Benedictine and Cistercian monks introduced Pinot Noir and Chardonnay and meticulously recorded 1000 years of vintages while establishing a tight network of stone wall divided micro climats called clos. The Côte de Nuits and the Côte de Beaune further divide the Côte d'Or, each roughly measuring 15 miles along the Route des Grands Crus. Along this escarpment rising 300 meters above the Saône River are the dizzying number of Communes still dedicated to the reputation and pedigree of Pinot Noir and Chardonnay.

BURGUNDY - CÔTE DE BEAUNE

The Côte de Beaune surely has the better reputation for its white wines. The harder Oxfordian limestone etches a sharper more defined minerality to the wines though each village represents a snapshot of the complex stratigraphic mix of marl and limestone. From the imposing hill of Corton to the gentle slopes of Montrachet, Chardonnay finds its finest expression in the famed vineyards above the Saône.

LOIRE

Not only France's longest river, the Loire stretches from the rocky Atlantic coast deep into the heart of the country past the town of Sancerre and Pouilly. It is hard to think of the Loire as a single appellation given the enormous variety of wines made here. From the crisp, saline Melon de Bourgogne of Muscadet, to the oxidized Chenin Blanc of Savennières, or the honey Chenin Blanc of Vouvray, to the grassy Sauvignon Blanc of Sancerre, the grapes and styles and soils vary tremendously. But with the array of wine comes the ceaseless drinkability of the wines copiously consumed in the bistros and restaurants of Paris.

FRIULI-VENEZIA GIULIA

Since rebuilding its vineyards post World War II, Friuli has become home to some of Italy's most impassioned producers of white wine. The great vineyards of Friuli stretch into the schistous ponco stones of the Julian Alps and even spread over into Slovenia, which was divided from Italy in 1945, and down along the iron rich Adriatic coast to the old Austrian resort town of Trieste. Friuli truly sits at the crossroads of Italian, Austrian, and Slavic tradition and cuisine producing fascinating wines of great depth and versatility.

WHITE AND ROSÉ

Bin GERMANY

Bottle

Even with a warming climate, German vineyards sit at the Northernmost extreme of where grapes can be effectively grown. Here the world's greatest white grape finds its home along the scenic hills of the Rhine river valley. The profoundly aromatic and tart Riesling grape is unparalleled in longevity and succeeds in a myriad of styles. Although often taken as a sweet wine, Riesling is most often fermented dry to accentuate its piercingly tart and clean finish. German wine labels can be hard to read since the 1970's with the inclusion of the Prädikat designations. Now the German wine producers group (VDP) is passionately reviving great vineyard sites and promoting wines of a dry style. From such a cool climate, expert German winemaking crafts wines of stunning length and complexity sure to find a home among seasoned collectors and newcomers alike.

MOSEL

The rolling Mosel river with its steep slate cover banks and charming patchwork of villages is the benchmark for classically styled Riesling. The crisp waters of the Mosel which flow down from the Vosges mountains reflect enough sunlight back onto these undulating slopes that would otherwise never produce fruit. Here the poetic names of the vineyards are attached to the village and the wines often carry the Prädikat distinction to indicate ripeness and sweetness.

RHEINGAU

This East-West bend of the Rhine river is the cultural and academic heart of winemaking in Germany. From Rüdesheim to Wiesbaden, the Taunus Mountains tower over the north banks of the river. The early thaws along the Taunus have long been attributed to sunlight reflecting from the Rhine and have permitted grape growing since the 9th century.

Riesling along the Rhine can be quite structured, powerful and more frequently fermented dry compared to its more filigreed Mosel counterpart.

BURGUNDY - CÔTE D'OR

Nothing like a red Burgundy can stir the imagination. For a 1000 years the Cistercian monks meticulously recorded minute details of topography and soils along what is call the "Golden Slope" - the Côte d'Or. Modern soil analysis confirm the mind-bending complexity of the soil that the monks so assiduously denoted when they created the maze of clos to delineate one climat from another. Here, inside this labyrinth of impeccable stone walls, the beguiling Pinot Noir grape reaches its apogee. Lifetimes are spent enchanted by the mystery and polish of every vintage and bottling. A lifetime well spent.

BAROLO

Barolo is often called the King of Wines, and with good reason. The name "Barolo" can be confusing because it refers to a village, a style of wine made exclusively from Nebbiolo, and the viticultural zone surrounding the eponymous town. Nebbiolo is a grape with tremendous and explosive aromatic vigor, legendary longevity and, when handled well, replicate the myriad of soils and aspects of this most picturesque region.

LA MORRA

The "Modernists" loved La Morra's gentle soil. The towering South-Southeast facing slope is a magnificent panorama of the central Barolo valley. Though the oak has been throttled back in recent vintages, tannins are often supple while the fruit is plush and clean.

1527	Elio Altare 2010	142
476	Mauro Molino, Conca 2010	126

BAROLO TOWNSHIP

Barolo sits roughly in the center of the Barolo zone where the denser clay driven soils of Serralunga and the lighter limestone soils of La Morra meet. Many consider this to be the most balanced expression of Barolo, especially along the Cannubi ridge.

MONFORTE d'ALBA

Monforte d'Alba is home to some of Barolo's most progressive and experimental winemakers. Though it roughly shares the same clay emphasis of the Serralunga valley, the aspects shift here creating far more diverse micro-climates. It is home to the broadest style of Barolo wine.

CASTIGLIONE FALLETTO

The actual geographic center of Barolo, Castiglione Falletto depends the most on great weather. At its best, the wines can have the best of all worlds: the Power of Serralunga, the Finesse of La Morra, and the Structure of Monforte.

SERRALUNGA d'ALBA

Power. Those well acquainted with Barolo often find themselves eventually drifting towards the haunting complexity and strength of Serralunga. Its great crus like Vigna Rionda last an eternity, both in the bottle and on the palate. The wine's tannins give it a reputation for austerity, but patience rewards here most of all.
